

“We are all human beings. And we’re born completely void of judgements or delineations, right? But we create them, all those things are created, man-made. And then we end up in this world full of borders and ideas that very often don’t ring true to anybody. If we don’t start seeing people as people, we are doomed to repeat.”

Honey West

Chicago-based performer